Who's Who at FSC

Thank You, Publix!

The Publix Super Markets Charity Commons was dedicated on February 12, 1999, after its successful completion. These new buildings were embraced enthusiastically by students who moved in as soon as they were allowed.

Florida Southern College's eastern edge has totally been transformed because of the generosity and commitment to this college by Publix Super Markets Charities. The spacious and contemporary student housing consists of three buildings and a laundry facility. Its construction was made possible because of a $5 million gift from the Publix Super Markets Charities, led by Carol Jenkins Barnett.

Not only is the Publix Super Markets Charities Commons a symbol of the commitment and generosity of a family, but also of an organization that has continued to make a difference for young people. The Publix Super Markets Charities, formerly the George W. Jenkins Foundation, is a name synonymous with caring and service in every community where you find a Publix. The Jenkins name is no stranger to our campus. It has been a name associated for over forty years with concern and progress at FSC. They have long been believers in education and the mission of Florida Southern College.

The Unveiling

It IS Time

"It's Time!" state the billboards placed strategically across campus. "It's Time!" announces President Reuschling at the first convocation. What is all this clamor for anyway? The time has finally come to see the hard work of the annual fund raising committee begin to pay off.

For the last three years, a vigorous campaign has been taking place to give Florida Southern a face-lift as it has never had before. The old dormitories and Greek facilities were the first buildings to go down. Out went the old swimming pool and in went the Olympic size swimming pool and new fitness center.

This new fitness center, featuring a fully-equipped weight room, basketball court and area for students to watch television and relax, was christened "The Nina B. Hollis Wellness Center" and opened to all students in the last year.

In the last year alone, several new dormitories were built. This spring, the new dormitories for the upper-class independent students were opened.

Other buildings on campus are also being renovated. The front of the humanities building was torn down and a new music department area is being build. Also, renovation of the Polk Science building is underway.

These changes promise to bring the college experience of the average student to higher levels; none of which could have been possible if it weren't for the efforts of the $50 million Capitol Campaign. As President Reuschling stated in the fall issue of The Southern News, "This campaign is essential for Florida Southern College's continued growth in quality and reputation. Its successful completion will signal that the college, with the help of alumni and friends, is ready to move to the next level of academic recognition."

The Interlachen Staff

However, these next few years will be the years of transition. Tractors, bulldozers and construction workers have become a common sight. As the renovation takes place, students have the rare privilege to watch progress taking place right before their eyes.

Students will graduate and move on only having seen part of the big picture. Years later, when the buzz of machinery is nothing but a faded memory, they can say that they were there when the dream was becoming a reality.

So we, the Interlachen staff, invite you to take a look inside at this year of transition. See the faces of students and faculty as they embrace the ever-changing future. Discover their lives and experiences during this time. Yes, it is time. It is time to experience Florida Southern College life during the year of 1998-99.

FASHION ON CAMPUS

STRUT YOUR STUFF

Students at FSC have their own unique style and it has been seen all over campus this year.

The girls seemed to favor the Calvin Klein jeans and tank tops.

Belly rings became more and more popular.

The guys favored the oversized shorts and cargo pants and the ever-popular Tommy Gear was sported as well.

For some people like Ryan Miller it was all about comfort. "I just wake up and wear what's there," he said.

Maybe this was how some felt when they wore their pajama bottoms to class.

AFTER HOURS HAVING FUN THE NIGHT LIFE

A frequently asked question from visitors to our fine campus is, "What is there to do around here at night?" Students have discovered ways to pass the time after the sun sets.

Freshmen Allison Pfundtner and Nancye Wilbur found that going out of town is one way to escape boredom.

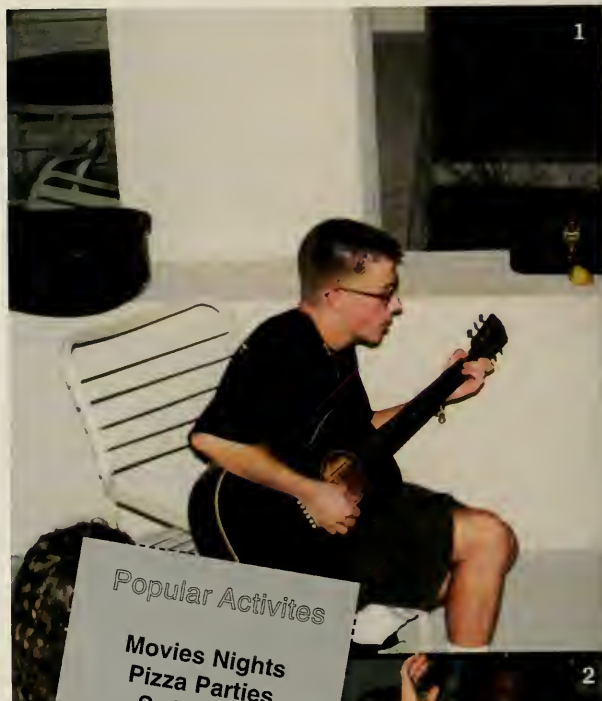

"You can run the lake or bike ride or just hang out and watch movies. But I usually don't stay in Lakeland because there's nothing really exciting to do," said Pfundtner.

"My friends and I like to go to the Sugar Palm Club in Ybor City for swing dancing," said Wilbur.

However, senior Chad Costella finds plenty to do here, taking in the local atmosphere.

"After a hard day of class work my friends and I enjoy an evening at the Regal Begal (Kau's) drinking a frosty mug of our favorite selected beverage."

THE SOCIAL ASPECT

Ryan Miller and Richard Bond share common thoughts on morning classes.

Tasha Locklear and Bryanna Buckholt are forever friends.

Whether you are talking about a friendship or a romantic relationship, it can be said that they take a lot of hard work and maintenance.

During these college years, students had the opportunity to make friends that would last a lifetime. Many of them found the person they will one day marry. If they work hard enough at that relationship, some of those couples will still be around for many years to come.

Every year, students get married at Florida Southern College. They gave their vows promising to be committed to each other for the rest of their lives. Every year, students graduate and give each other their address promising to keep in touch.

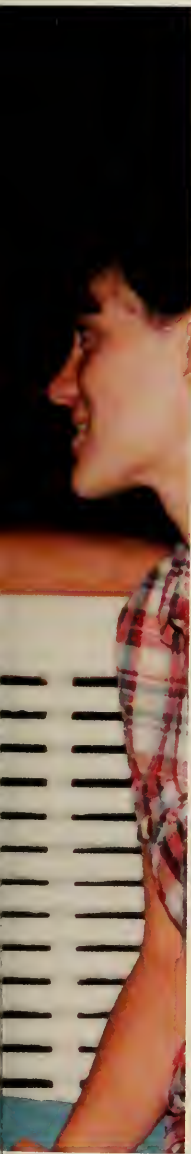

Yet, in the end, it takes dedication and commitment to keep those relationships going over the years. After all, these are the "golden" relationships.

THE ROOMMATE

Amanda Malone and Nikki George find that they can count on each other.

Lisa Mozo and Christy Merrel have learned that dependability is important in any friendship.

Our first shot at a roommate is always a gamble. After the first year, though, we had either made a friend for life or were ready for another craps-shoot as to whom our new room-mate would be the following year.

While some were lucky enough to room with a friend from back home or got their own room, most of us were sure at the end of the first week what kind of relationship we would have with our new roomie.

"My roommate is my best friend," said junior Tiffany Miles. "We've been roommates for three years and I can't imagine college life without her."

However, freshman Ryan Woung would rather not have the hassle of a roommate.

"It's a lot easier having my own room because I don't have to worry about disturbing someone else, or whether or not the room is messy," he said.

O- Week Getting Oriented

THE BEST KEPT SECRET

The week began with moving in, long lines to register and sad partings with family members. However, students were quickly thrust into an experience of a lifetime.

Some of the more memorable bonding experiences included the Falls Adventure Ropes Course, Playfair, the Mardi Gras Party and Dance and the Tacky Dance. "Risque Business" showed us many of the college pressures and hardships. Joe Martin and his "Tricks of the Grade" taught that sucking up and being ten minutes early to every class aren't always the best ways to get an "A" (although it doesn't always hurt).

Also, fraternity and sorority open houses gave freshmen a first glance of what Greek life was like.

O-week was a time to become oriented to college life. Students met a lot of people, got the inside track on how things really work on campus from our O-leaders, and had some fun, too.

FRESHMEN MOVE IN

For most students, one of the most frustrating times of college is getting all of our "stuff" from there to here.

Some needed a U-Haul while others were content to throw everything in the back of the family station wagon and head out.

Once we made it on campus and found our room, it we piled all of our possessions on the bed and surrounding floor. We then unpacked, but not before ceremonially hanging our favorite Three Stooges or Garfield poster on the wall. Then it was time to begin to "settle in."

Event Welcome, Mom and Dad!

FAMILY WEEKEND

Parents and students get involved at SUB's Muder Mystery.

Some have the Halloween Spirit, while others only wish they had.

Family Weekend was a time for parents to get back together with the children they haven't seen for months, spend the weekend together, and listen to their students shamelessly beg for money.

This year the school set up several events involving both parents and students while mingling with our campus friends and some of our professors.

"I had a great time," said freshman Kevin Lytton. "It was nice to see my family after two months. It was also relaxing, not having to worry about homework or anything."

Some of the high points of the weekend included the Old Fashioned Shrimp Boil and Chicken Grill, the SUB Murder Mystery and the Picnic Lunch and Pumpkin Decorating Contest.

The Events

- *SUB Murder Mystery
- *Shrimp Bowl & Chicken Grill
- *Panhellenic
- Trick or Treat
- *Wellness Walk
- *Pumpkin Decorating Contest
- *Open Houses

Family members were invited to enjoy an outdoor barbecue.

Kevin Lytton appreciated the visit from his parents and his dog, Minnie.

Rachel Van, Jack Plating and his grandmother squeeze close for a group hug.

Dana Cobb (center), her mother and friend Candice Douberly are happy to spend time together.

These family members enjoy the friendly environment.

The Groups LOOKING UP

BEYOND IMAGINATION

Something can be said for going beyond oneself to help others out. Increasingly, society is learning that there is more to life than the simple activities of existence. There is a higher cause.

Flipping through the channels on television demonstrates that the "spiritual" side of things is a common subject. The popularity of shows such as "Touched by an Angel" gives proof of that.

It is also true that some of the most stressful years of a person's life are during the college years. This is the time when students are learning who they are and what they can do for society.

There is so much opportunity for a person to make a difference during these years. It is through the different ministries on campus that many of the students have found a way to reach out to their fellow students and to the community.

Ministries:

- *Beyond
- *Wesley Fellowship
- *Baptist Student Movement
- *All Campus Ministries
- *RUF
- *FCA
- *Newman Club

2 Heather Scherer practices her part in the skit.

3 Rachel Van plays her violin during worship at Beyond.

4 Beth Smith, Rachele Brown and Michel Solan ask for the audience to join in the singing.

5 Hennie Schoeman really likes that wig.

6 Dr. Pepper and Bible study can go hand in hand.

The Place Getting Fit

The Wellness Center

New students are given a tour of the fitness center.

Chuck Wicks takes body building very seriously.

The Hollis Wellness Center has added many an entertaining hour for those people who have found nothing else to do on campus. It has a basketball court, an aerobics room, a pool, a gym, pool tables, and a big-screen television for the students and faculty.

Students seem to enjoy most of the facilities but have a few reservations about the planning.

"The equipment is great and it has a good view," said junior Uiraj Sikand.

"It's the greatest thing that ever happened to Florida Southern," said senior Toby McGlinn. "The canoe machine has really helped my workout."

"It's a really nice facility," said senior Kesha Little. "The basketball court is smaller than the Jenkins Field House but it's well-lit and it makes you want to play more."

Programs:

- *Weight Room
- *Basketball Court
- *Aerobics classes
- *Pool tables
- *Large-screen T.V.

Aimee Kane and Kate Worthington find that running around campus adds much to the exercise routine.

Allie Andreano sets up the perfect shot .

Pete Hyc wonders if he can handle this machine.

Keagan Kerr uses every ounce of his strength to finish this set.

The People The Commuter

LIVING OFF-CAMPUS

Students connect through the Commuter Student Association

Dave Dowdy is enraptured by this art work in the Melvin Gallery.

Each year, more and more students are opting to live off campus and commute to class every day. Living off campus can be an advantage to college life.

Raquel Banuelos enjoys the freedom it has to offer. "I like it because I make my own rules, I have people over when I want and I can do as I please," she said.

For some, living off campus can be easier just because they don't have to share a bathroom with a dozen other people.

David Dowdy said, "Being a commuter was a benefit to me this year. Because I'm a second-year senior, it allowed me to concentrate more on my classes and work schedule."

Although these students become somewhat disconnected from campus activities, it is something they learn to work around.

The Advantages

- *Personal bathroom
- *More privacy
- *Less regulation

Disadvantages

- *Disconnected from campus activities
- *Takes longer to get to class

Charlie Fair and Ahylia Akoi spend time between classes to enjoy a cigarette.

Lydia Suradja finds that the library is still one of the best places to study no matter where you live.

Cynthia Sessums reads "The Southern" in order to keep up with campus events, a hard thing for commuters to do.

Wade and Joy Irish opted to move off campus when they were married.

Max Cooks has found the perfect parking space and intends to keep it.

FASHION

Tatoos & Body Piercing

THE PERMANENT MARK

Tattoos and piercings were once just a craze, but now have come back in full swing. Many people we see, whether we know it or not, has a tatoos or some pierced body part. Others just long for them.

According to Cristina Cobb, "I would get another hole in my ear if my skin wasn't so sensitive."

Tatoos can often express feelings or attitudes of people. And these feelings are permanent marks that will last for most of their lives.

Business Stretchin' Dough

Money Matters

For many, starting college gives students a new responsibility in the area of finance. Students need to balance money needed for studies, money for basic needs, and money used for fun.

Whether we get an allowance from mom and dad, or we're barely scraping by, money is an issue all of us at FSC have to deal with.

For those of us with little or no income from home, we had to get jobs to pay for books, supplies and entertainment.

Some were lucky enough to find one in our field of study while others did whatever they could to bring home the bucks. Some, like Chris Tibbetts, didn't care about what the work consisted of.

"I just want to pay the bills and to have some extra money to party with friends," he said.

Christa Vickers tries to find the best deal for her money as she selects a card from the college book store.

Food The "Caf"?

Chow Time

"It's time to eat!" For students living on campus, the craving to fill the stomach can come at almost any given hour of the day. Late night studying leads to midnight cravings, and many times, classes will conflict with lunchtime.

The cafeteria offers a variety of foods for those who get there while it is open. Also,

Taco Bell is open all day for students to run in and grab a quick meal.

Local restaurants also are a popular hang out for students when the cafeteria food becomes too monotonous. And of course, when nothing else is available, there is always room in the fridge for those necessary snacks.

The Campaign

Students who are new to our campus may not realize the dramatic changes that have recently taken place. However, upperclassmen have experienced a lot of new advantages thanks to an ambitious program, which still has a few goals to be met. "It's Time" is a five-year project that began in 1996, which is aimed at updating the campus, while seeking to retain its original structure and appeal.

The Nina B. Hollis Wellness Center, new dorms, and fiber-optic wiring throughout the campus are just a few examples of the improvements that have been realized thanks to this project. The project has been so successful that double the monetary goal has been raised.

According to Bill Finch, Vice President for Development, "There has never been a setback. Along with a disappointment comes a surprise; if a person doesn't give as much as hoped, someone else [contributes]."

Still to come are changes to two of the academic departments. The music department will have a new building and the interior of Polk Science will be renovated. "The renovation of Polk Science will be the most striking of any [building]. The entire building will be reconfigured. It will be handicap-accessible and state-of-the-art."

Along with physical changes, the project will live on through its institution of funding allotments to the areas of faculty development and financial aid for students.

President Reuschling shares the plans that are in store for FSC during opening convocation in September.

ROTC: The Tough

College can be an expensive investment. Many students depend on loans, grants, and help from family members. However for some students, there is another way to pay off tuition. When a student joins the ROTC program, they automatically get tuition completely paid for by the government. What is required of them is to become involved participants in the ROTC activities and serve in the army for four years after college is over.

This program is designed to help students who are willing to give some years of service to their country. In exchange for the service they render, they will receive the training necessary to get a job once they leave the army.

During their four years of college, students learn the basics of army life. They also have the opportunity to receive higher ranking while obtaining their undergraduate degree. In this way, they can become second lieutenants by the time they graduate. Consequently, they won't have to start as a cadet when they become a part of the real army and are stationed somewhere in the U.S.

This kind of program is not for every college student. Still, it is a good opportunity for those students who are willing to give part of their lives to serve their country. Not only will they know they are involved in a worthy cause, but they will also have a college degree to go with it.

The ROTC Color Guard proudly displays the two flags to which they hold their loyalty.

The Right Note

(Top) Tosh Sargeant demonstrates his mastery of the double bass.

These jazz members practice for the annual Christmas Gala.

The Music Department offers one of the most unique programs on campus in that it gives music students practical experience in the required curriculum that prepares them for their future careers.

For example, performance majors are required to perform two student recitals, as well as participate in a weekly recital. This gives music students practice in performing before an audience as well as the benefit of constructive criticism from their peers.

Michele Tamayo, junior piano major, said, "I think it's really great to learn and work with people who are talented, as we bond and develop our performance ability."

There are numerous ensembles and classes that hold open auditions, regardless of a student's major. The most noted ensembles of the department are; The Concert Chorale, under Dr. Larry Sledge, the Symphony Band, directed by Dr. Brian Brink, and the Symphony Orchestra, directed by Arthur Prano.

However, there are other groups, including instrument-specific chamber ensembles and lessons which students may get involved in.

Donald Lunsford, a junior saxophone major, said "Mr. Hunn (the saxophone instructor) is a complete and total bad-ass and I want to be just like him when I grow up."

Of special note is the Chamber Choir, a small ensemble taken from the Chorale, which accepted an invitation last May to sing in many famous places throughout England and Scotland, including Westminster Abbey and St. Giles Cathedral.

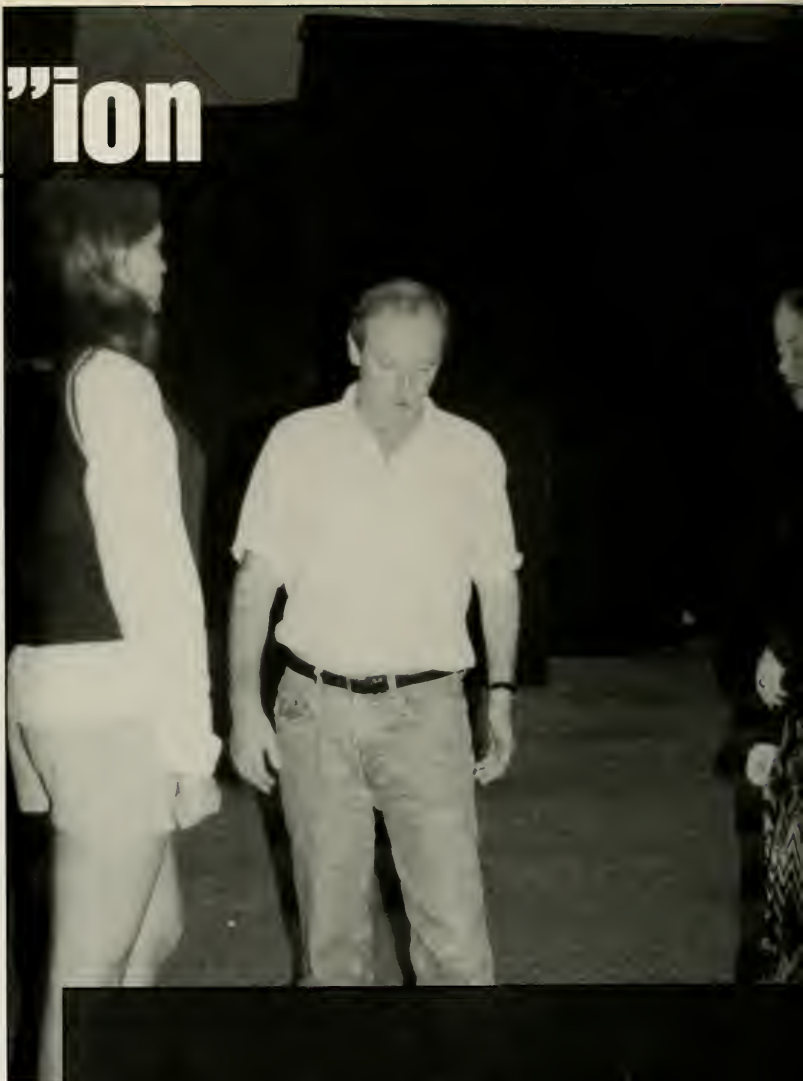

Karen Bruce, a senior humanities major, said of the experience, "It was an amazing opportunity to travel, and bond with a group of people while having the honor of performing in historic cathedrals."

The "Act"ion

All students have the opportunity to develop their acting skills while attending college. It is not an exclusive right of the theater majors. Many students take theater and acting classes as electives. In these classes students learn just how tough and demanding the job of an actor can be. Theater majors know this fact quite well.

Tryouts and performances are not optional for the theater majors, and they take hours and hours of hard work. However, whether building sets, setting up and working lights, or performing on stage, the theater students always seem to be having a lot of fun. Many times, their required meetings take away from other activities such as clubs, work-study, or down time. No matter the difficulties, theater students would not give up their positions for the world.

Freshman Tanya Turner commented, "The best part about being in the Theater Department is that you get experience early, but the worst ... has to be the Buckner Theater lights!"

Hands-On

One of the greatest forms of expression is what we create with our hands. Art majors spend many of the waking hours of their days expressing the things that are in their minds and hearts on paper or canvas. One of the things that many hope to learn while at college is how to express themselves more clearly.

The art classes offered are quite extensive and specific. The last couple years have seen several new art classes become a part of the curriculum. Last year, after much debate, art classes in human figure drawing and painting were added to the list of art classes. There was a big of a struggle concerning these classes, because of the study of nude human figures.

This year, new courses are being added in the areas of photographic art and computer art design. Our world is becoming increasingly technologically advanced. With these advances come new forms of artistic expression. In the last few years, graphic design has become a reality. Many art students are interested in creating art on these new computer programs. Also, for those interested in creating images on screen, video art classes and creative photography classes have become part of the listing.

With all these classes available, there are endless possibilities for an artist to express him/herself.

This sculpture becomes vibrant under the creative hand of Rebecca Greenstein.

With Honors

New to Florida Southern this year, the Honor's Program admitted 32 freshmen to be "guinea pigs" to experiment with higher-level courses to see how they would fair. The two honor's courses that were offered this year were "Women in Literature" and "Crime and Punishment." As a senior in high school, a prospective student became eligible by achieving at least a 3.5 G.P.A., a 1200 on the S.A.T. and/or a 29 on the A.C.T. They were then required to fill out an application and write an essay. Once in the program, the students were required to take certain courses and, in their senior year, take on an honor's project. Keeping up was very time consuming, but the classes proved to be interesting and even nutty! "I like how it enables me to interact with the others as well as hear their differing opinions," remarked Amy Stevens, one of the students participating in the program. In the classes, the students would analyze a piece of literature and share their ideas once prompted by the professor. Dr. Buck, one of the lecture professors, revealed, "At first I was afraid that the program would be too elite, but they are a great group of kids. Just as athletes have special programs for their strengths, the honor students have a program of their own."

Jamie Phillips, Marsha Glanville and Tasha Smith scrutinize their "Exceptional Studies."

There is always so much to do and so little time in which to do it. This is something that is quite true in the lives of many college students. One of the biggest challenges that face students when they first begin college is learning how to set their priorities. Those first few weeks show students how vast their opportunities are. So many clubs, organizations, and people demand their attention and ask for a bit of their time. Wise students will choose a few that they want to be involved in. After that, the student must allot for time to do what they came to college to do in the first place. That is, to learn and study in order to be trained for the job they want when they graduate.

Finding that time to study is a most important part of a student's day. Some students need to find a quiet place by themselves where they can study. Others find that they study better while listening to music or even watching television.

When it comes time for final exams, many students find that study groups help with the learning process. Dormitory lobbies are often filled with these little groups of students who pick at each other's brains.

Practicing

The internship program, also known as field experience and practicum, is a good way for students to apply what they learn in the classroom before they must face "the real world." This program, which is required in most disciplines, allows us to find out if we like a certain career path, as well as network with professionals in that particular field.

According to Dr. Janet Burnett, director of internships for the Psychology Department, "You can't get a job without experience. The best reference you can get is by doing a good job in field experience."

The other side to internships is discovering that a particular field is not up to our expectations. It can be a means of deciding that we may need to look towards a different career.

Within each department, a number of different types of careers are available, and a student may use an internship as a starting point to a possible career he or she had not considered before. It is a way for us to solidify our aspirations, as well as weed out dissatisfactory alternatives.

The group is ready to see the way the Scots play soccer as they stand in front of the soccer stadium in Scotland.

This past summer, twenty four Florida Southern students and eight faculty members spent the summer in merry old England. There, the group stayed in Harlaston Manor to study various subjects and take in the country. The group did a lot of traveling, taking trips to York and Edinburgh, Scotland. They also visited The Lake District, Cambridge, and spent three or four days in London.

During the group's first weekend, they explored the area. Many found the local pubs a great place to find the genuine English experience. Before final exams, students were given a five-day weekend.

"Jennifer Fehr, David Risch, Chris Taylor and I decided to go to Paris," said sophomore Stephanie Jackson. "It was an excellent experience and I had an amazing time. I met so many wonderful people and can't wait to go back to Europe."

Sigma Alpha Epsilon was founded on the banks of the Black Warrior River March 9, 1856 at the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa, Alabama.

The Florida-Gamma chapter was installed at Florida Southern College on November 12, 1949. The brothers of Sigma Alpha Epsilon work hard throughout the year to support their philanthropy, the S.P.C.A.

The symbol of Sigma Alpha Epsilon is Leo the Lion and their colors are Purple and Gold.

The Florida Southern Men's Soccer team has again reached a level of excellence that has come to be expected of all Florida Southern sports.

This year the team finished 8-7-2, and is making constant strides toward division superiority. Our Mocs had several milestones this year including their 7th consecutive win at the Mayor's Cup, media coverage with a game broadcast on television and upsetting a nationally ranked team. Dan Levy led the team in scoring; and Nathan Garcia led in assists, coming in 2nd place nationally in assists per game.

Another national ranking goes to the fans, according to head coach Kris Pahl. "We came in 6th in attendance; and we owe that to all the fans that come out to support our guys," he said.

Coach Pahl sees good things happening next year for the team. "We've got most of the team returning," he said, "and we've got another tough schedule but we expect to continue doing well."

Clearing the Path

Women's Soccer

In this, its inaugural year, the Florida Southern Women's soccer team fared relatively well. With a season of 3-13-1, the team got a lot of experience and will be better prepared for what is to come next season, according to Head Coach Christine Rizzieri.

"This was our first year of competition, and it was a building year," she said. "We only had a few players that could be considered as senior players, and they showed a lot of emotion and leadership, both on and off the field."

One of the players mentioned as being a team leader was Noreen Drenthe, leading scorer for the team and receiver of an honorable mention for the all-region team in the Sunshine State conference. Also, Elizabeth Ryerson, Julie Ouimette, Sarah Corbett and Krista Knappman were considered to be among the team's senior players.

Leveling the Competition

Volleyball

In a game where a combination of timing, precision, and teamwork "is" the key to success, our Lady Mocs had it all together this year. With Coach Lois Webb supplying guidance and leadership, success was inevitable.

On the court, team captain Amber Jaekel led the team to victory after victory. There was always a sense of pride in the team as they set foot on the court. The rush of stepping onto the court was one of the most incredible feelings. These girls had the knowledge that, with their abilities, their job would always be accomplished.

The Lady Mocs showed their opponents in every instance that they knew exactly how to play the game. Even when winning seemed distant, the team always continued to push through and do what they set out to do. To accomplish one's goals relying on one's own abilities is the ultimate achievement.

The Lady Mocs have done just that.

Going the Distance

Cross-Country

Did you ever see people around campus playing in the mud? Or what about in the little lake that formed in the valley between Dell and Hollis? They seemed to be having the time of their lives. And they were. Did you know who they were?

The answer, most of the time, was the Florida Southern Cross Country Mocs. They were a team of individuals. You are probably thinking that is an oxymoron, but it is true. The cross country team was a closely knit team. As a matter of fact you could have called them siblings. They loved to play, encourage, strengthen, push each other to the limit, and listen to one another. All were extremely valuable to the individual and the team aspects.

However, when they stepped up to the starting line they all become individuals. But standing on the sidelines was the best support they will probably ever have. While one was running, the rest of the team was waiting, watching, and cheering them on. The team, the individual, and the accomplishments they achieved made up the cross country Mocs.

Emily Vall pushes herself to stay ahead of everyone. Cross-country was both a physical and mental exercise.

What would a school be without spirit? It would just be buildings and people that really did not care about anything. But in the words of the French, Florida Southern had 'esprit de cour.' In the English language it means spirit of the group. Florida Southern students certainly had spirit. And who better to have helped students achieve more 'esprit de cour' than our spirit teams. Two cheerleading squads, a step team and a diamond girl squad helped put spirit up and over the top. Each squad had a different responsibility but the same goal to motivate an already motivated school to support their athletes even more. When students came out and gave their support, the spirit teams' goals had been reached. The teams felt great when they got more student involvement; and spirit ran higher throughout the school.

A heart-pounding hour broken into four quarters. Five brave ladies against the Lady Mocs. The competition might be stiff, but the Lady Mocs practiced hard. They readied their minds, bodies, and spirits. With every practice and each game the team became stronger.

A strong team was extremely important to the Lady Mocs. The competition could get really nasty. The referees could be unfair. Being able to fall back on teammates was important. It helped the Lady Mocs to pull each other through the trenches.

Men's Baseball

Any sport takes practice, dedication, hard work, teamwork, and faithfulness. Florida Southern baseball expected that plus more. Every member of the team expected nothing but one hundred percent from one another. Anything less was just not acceptable.

The standards were set high, but not unreachable. Each practice was set up to help every player perfect his skills. Practice makes perfect.

The dedication of FSC players was one of true love for the all-American game. A game of tradition and importance in America, the members of the team understood and cherished the traditions they follow.

Dedication to the program in grades, emotion and performance was important to each player and coach.

Softball has always been the girls' version of the all-American game. But was the girls' version of the game any easier or less competitive than the guys' game? "No way" was the answer "you'd" receive from any softball player. The bruises, scrapes and broken bones were just as prevalent in softball as in baseball. The dedication to a game that wrecks them sometimes physically was awesome in players.

The Lady Mocs softball team had awesome players. They were dedicated to the game and played their hearts out, even through injuries. They were dedicated to keeping alive a game that every little girl can play. They just showed the competition that they are number one.

Driving For A Win

Men's and Women's

A game that doesn't have a referee yelling at you sounds relaxing, right? A game that doesn't have a coach yelling at you from the sidelines sounds relaxing, right? A game where technique means everything, and a low score is good makes it sound like golfers have it easy. But in reality they practice as hard as any other team.

The Men's and Women's Golf teams practice hard to win. The teams are always practicing to improve their techniques. They work on improving their techniques, their swings, their shots, and even their minds.

Golf is just as challenging mentally as it is physically. The mind must be on the golf game at all times, so practicing is very important to the golfers of the Florida Southern teams.

Crushing the Competition

Tennis Teams

Tennis is a game that at the very most can only have four players on the court. However, most matches are played with only two players. It is a game of intense concentration, hard work, and quickness. It is also a game of wits. Tennis is not just merely hitting the ball back and forth across the net.

Florida Southern men's and women's tennis teams put in hours of hard work to perfect their games. Practices were just as intense as the matches were. These practices pushed each member of the team to do their best.

The Mocs tennis team members helped each other become what they are today: a highly trained and talented team of tennis players. Their legacy goes on as they gain high rankings within the tennis world.

Rising To The Occasion

Waterski Team

Although they are not considered an NCAA Division II team, if you tell that to any member of the water ski team they'll just shrug their shoulders. The fact that there isn't all that fancy mumbo jumbo in front of Florida Southern Water Ski doesn't make a difference to them.

They pour their hearts and souls into the sport, and most of all have a whole hell of a lot of fun.

The water ski team brought home a second place from nationals in the small private school division and seventh place over all in the small schools division.

Individuals, teammates and hard work all go into a good program.

The water ski members are great people, excellent teammates, and know how to work hard. They enjoy their sport, do it to the best of their abilities and set achievable goals. While having fun they continue to help the program grow and make teamwork look extremely easy without a fancy title.

Strengthening A Community

Intramurals

Is it going through or is it bouncing off? Basketball was the second intramural sport for the guys.

Even President Reuschling gets involved in intramurals. President Reuschling believes in bringing the community together.

Not everyone on campus can be an NCAA Division II athlete. And with that aspect not every NCAA Division II athlete is good at every sport. This is where intramurals come into play. Intramural sports are for everyone, good or bad, just as long as you come to have fun.

However, just because it is meant to be fun does not mean there isn't fierce competition. As a matter of fact, sometimes you wonder if they are playing for more than a T-shirt, but the college that plays together stays together. No matter how nasty or tough the game gets there is good sportsmanship. At the end of every game you hear exchanges of "good game," "great game," and "you did a good job."

For those very few sore losers, just remember ... it's only a game.

Agnes Johnson Rowe Award

Agnes Johnson Rowe Award Recipient:
Julie Fogleman
representing her sorority,
Alpha Chi Omega

Julie Fogleman came to Florida Southern College as a freshman in the fall of 1995. She became actively involved on campus as a student government officer from that first year. By her senior year, she became president of Student Government.

It was clear from the start that she wanted to make a difference on her campus. Student issues have always been an important part of her agenda.

It is through her persistence and hard work that visitation hours will be changed next year to better accommodate the students who live on campus.

Her efforts are the legacy that she leaves behind her and they are the wonderful example that her fellow students will have to follow.

Award Nominees

For years, Florida Southern College has distinguished one lady as "Miss Southern." In 1995, the name of the award was changed to honor Mrs. Agnes Johnson Rowe, Director of Alumni Relations until she retired in 1981. She was also president of the Florida Southern Alumni Association and received the college's Distinguished Alumni Award. With the new title, the award has also received a new meaning. Students nominated (both male and female) must have a cumulative grade point average of 3.0, be a campus leader and have senior status.

James C. Rogers Award Recipient:
Todd Willis
representing his fraternity,
Lambda Chi Alpha

Todd Willis also entered Florida Southern College as a freshman in 1995. He became involved in several different facets of student life on campus. He became an active member of Student Government, Wesley Fellowship and became a part of the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity.

When he was chosen to be a part of Omicron Delta Kappa, the national leadership honorary society, he eventually became president.

Over and over, Todd has proven himself to be a dependable person and a natural leader in the activities he has become involved in.

Through his personal treatment of those around him and his friendliness, he will not soon be forgotten.

In 1981, a very distinguished faculty member by the name of James C. Rogers passed away. He graduated in 1969 from Florida Southern as an outstanding campus leader. Since 1982, a special award has been given to one outstanding senior male each year to commemorate all that James C. Rogers stood for while he was a student at Florida Southern College.

Each person nominated for the award must have the following qualifications: senior status, maintain at least a cumulative 3.0 grade point average, and show campus leadership.

This year has proven that there were many people who were worthy of winning this award as well as the Agnes Johnson Rowe award.

1999 Honor Walk Student

During her four years of college, Heather Caricoffe has proven herself to be a "well-rounded" student in every sense of the word. She was involved in many different aspects of student life.

Academic Awards-

She earned the ODK Burnette Gilbert Outstanding Junior Award, The Florida Southern's Rhodes Scholar Nomination, FSC's ODK Leader of the Year, FSC Academic Merit Award Scholarship, Chapter FA Florida PEO Scholarship, National Dean's List, and Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

On Campus Involvement-

She has been an active member of the Student Government and became president of the senior class. She is also a Vice President of ODK. She has been involved with other groups such as Beta Beta Beta, Pre-Med Society, Florida Southern Varsity Volleyball, a Florida Resident Advisor and Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Community Service-

She volunteered her services in various hospitals, such as Lee Memorial, Nemours Children's Clinic, Peace River Center and Texas Children's Hospital. She also volunteered at Habitat for Humanity, assisting doctors and nurses with patients there.

This is by no means the whole of all that she has done. Along with her name being inscribed forever on the FSC walkway, a vibrant memory of all that she did on behalf of the students who attend this college will also remain.

Heather Caricoffe

"I am always aiming to improve the school, even if I cannot always enjoy the benefits. Who knows, my children might go to Florida Southern one day."

65th Honorary Chancellor

Robert F. Kennedy Jr.

"We do not inherit the Earth from our ancestors, we borrow it from our children."

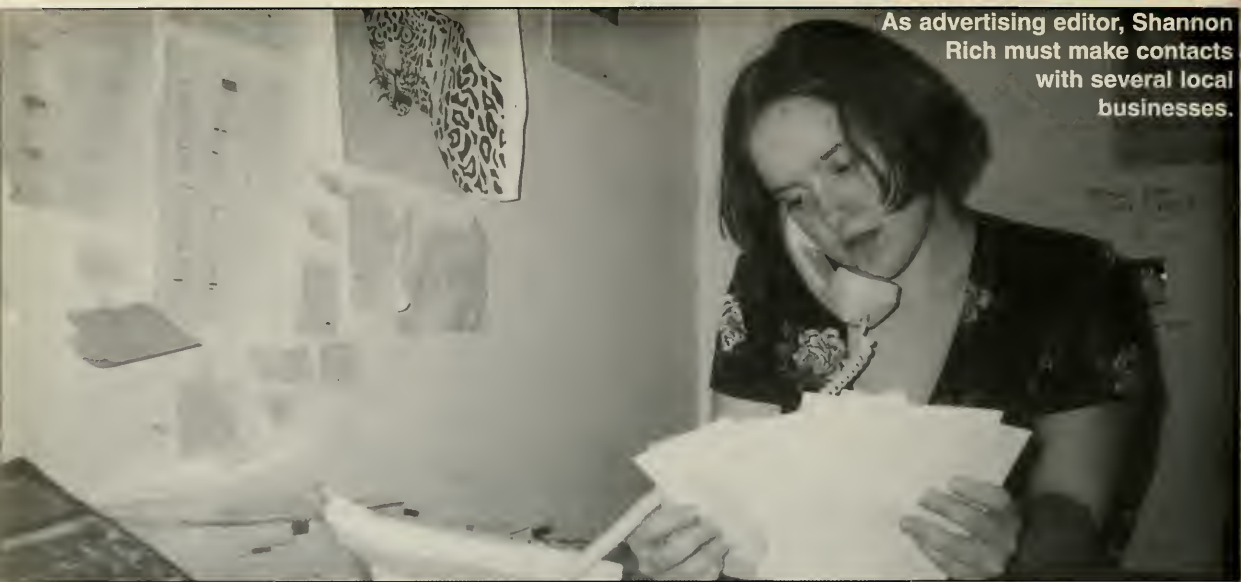

Robert F. Kennedy, Jr. is a resolute defender of the environment. As the Senior Attorney of the Natural Resources Defense Council and the Chief Prosecuting Attorney for the Hudson Riverkeeper, he is a firm believer that a nation cannot have a sound economy without a good environmental policy. In 1995, Kennedy brokered a bipartisan agreement between the EPA, New York Governor Pataki, and New York City Officials to protect the city's water supply.

In the tradition of his family, the heart of Kennedy's message is our responsibility and commitment to future generations.

Kennedy is described as a pioneer and an attorney in the area of municipal and government responsibility for environmental problems. His reputation as a resolute defender of the environment stems from a litany of successful legal actions: Prosecuting governments and companies for polluting the Hudson River and Long Island sound; winning settlements for the Hudson Riverkeeper; arguing cases to expand citizen access to the shoreline; and suing sewage treatment plants to force compliance with the Clean Water Act.

Kennedy is a graduate of Harvard University. He studied at the London School of Economics and received his law degree from the University of Virginia Law School.

As advertising editor, Shannon Rich must make contacts with several local businesses.

and*

Congratulations Hennie!

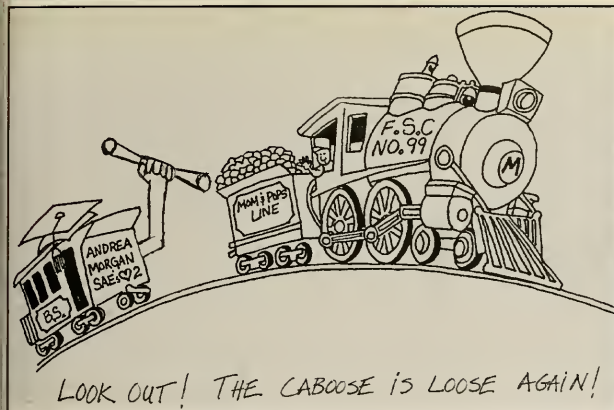

You took with both hands, the opportunity afforded you at FSC and filled our lives with four of our most wonderful years.

The values and principles you were taught, you held on to, the standards we set, you lived up to and the example we offered, you followed with self discipline and exceeded our best expectations. Not only were you an outspoken and excited Ambassador for Florida Southern College, but a radical and committed ambassador for Jesus Christ.

We salute your achievements on the cross country track, in the academic field and all the other areas you were involved in, but what most pleased us, was the REAL driving force behind your success namely, your love for your Creator and God.

We wish you all success with your future career and trust that you will always make a difference wherever you are.

This year has been full of a great many trials for the yearbook staff. There were many times that we did not think we could get this book printed out.

The product you hold in your hands is the symbol of all the hard work put in by our staff, and by the efforts of the many volunteers who stepped in and helped along the way. This book would not be complete without mentioning those who gave so much to help get this yearbook to you.

First, I would like to thank the Communications Department head, Dr. Barclay and the office manager, Judith Tylke. They were a great support to us and a source of strength and encouragement when things looked grim.

The

Secondly, I would like to thank our advisor, Bill Gregory, and his advertising agency, The Gregory Group, for helping us with the creative aspects of the cover and being our moral support.

And The Time Is NOW

The time has come for the past to meet hand in hand with the future. There is only one time to live. That is the present. Everything is changing. We cannot disregard the past, but we must move on. Let us not waste our time living in past moments or waiting for "things to get better the next day." Let us embrace what we have. It is an exciting future, bright and hopeful.

Life is to be lived. Let us take in all that it has, both good and bad and let us be grateful for it all. Because that is the privilege we have to live on this earth and to learn and grow and become better people. Don't waste another minute.

Put these memories safely behind you on an old dusty shelf and continue on to the next year.
